

CONFERENCE ON LIMITATIONS OF NAVIES UNDER WAY

Five Powers Inaugurate A

Premier MacDonald Outlines
Aims of Parley, Following King's Welcome

By George R. Holmes

I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

LONDON, Jan. 21.—In the glittering golden-hued royal gallery of the House of Lords, which through the years has seen history making of a far different sort, five powers inaugurated this morning the most ambitious attempt to limit navies that the world has seen since the historic Washington conference.

Today's opening was in startling contrast to Washington, where the then Secretary of State Charles Evans Hughes electrified the world with his sharp admonition to the powers to reduce their navies or be outbid by the United States.

There was no such peremptory beginning today—instead, King George of England opened the session with a hospitable and innocuous greeting which was followed by the heads of each government professing their loyalty to the cause of disarmament, but significantly calling attention to the manifold difficulties.

One after another Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson, Premier Andre Tardieu, Dino Grandi and Reijiro Wakatsuki arose and solemnly pledged their utmost efforts for success and pleaded for good will and confidence as indispensable.

And all reminded their colleagues of the shoals ahead.

It was a beautiful and inspiring spectacle. Behind the horseshoe table where the delegates sat was an enormous fresco depicting the death of Admiral Nelson at Trafalgar, and facing this a companion fresco, showing Wellington meeting Blucher after Waterloo—a warlike setting for such a tremendous undertaking in behalf of peace.

Nearly eight hundred persons filled the gallery. Of these thirty were the principal delegates and scores of technical advisers, three hundred newspaper correspondents, peers, British officials and others, but out beyond these the whole world listened in through the greatest world-wide radio hook-up ever attempted. Far away New Zealand heard as well as the nearby continent.

As host to the conference, Premier MacDonald outlined the aims of the parley immediately following King George's speech of welcome, stressing the most vital necessity of success. Unless naval competition stopped, he warned that the whole world was travelling the same road which led to 1914.

With this he made a special plea for special consideration of Britain's position as an island empire, more dependent upon seapower than any others.

Where Sixteen Perished in Plane Crash

Trapped in a giant Ford all-metal plane, which crashed and burst into flames between Los Angeles and San Diego, sixteen persons, including two pilots, were burned to death. Motor trouble was blamed for the accident.

The airliner carried a capacity load of home-bound men and women merry-makers from Agua Caliente race track. Picture shows all that remained of this monster of the air after the crash.

RUSSIAN PEASANT SEES HIS FREEDOM

Expects Modern Machinery
To Bring Happiness, Prosperity in Near Future

DREAM OF THE AGES

(This is the fifth of the series of six articles on present day Russia which Frazier Hunt, internationally known journalist, war correspondent and magazine writer, has written exclusively for International News Service.)

In this article Mr. Hunt tells us something of what happened when 100,000,000 peasants actually go "Red." The Lenin and Trotsky "intellectual" revolution of 1917, Mr. Hunt says, was a mere scratching of the surface as compared to this deeper, stronger and vastly more important economic revolution which has taken hold of Russia during the last two years.)

LONDON, Jan. 21.—A peasant boy walking a hundred miles to see a tractor and to learn how to drive it—Squads of American tractors plowing furrows five miles long in the rich, black, virgin earth of the giant farm of the Soviets—the greatest wheat farm in the world, now barely two years old—

Millions of poor peasants flocking into collective farm units and pleading for tractors and modern machinery—a mass movement beyond belief and beyond proof—

This is the swinging, kaleidoscopic picture I took away from the countryside of great Russia.

It is the picture of the real revolution; not the 1927 Lenin revolution, but a deeper, stronger, vastly more important revolution.

In 1917 the 125,000,000 peasants took the land and divided it up among themselves. With their age-long land hunger satisfied they felt that they were on the verge of a new life. But it did not come. No new rewards were theirs—no better homes, schools, dresses, shoes, plows, machinery—no better life. The "dark" villages, a million of them scattered over the vast reaches of mighty Russia, remained dark villages—unlit by new homes, new ideas, education, better equipment, electricity.

They belonged to the past. They plowed and planted and reaped as their grandfather serfs had done a century before. The cities had failed them. The cities took their wheat and their sons and gave them nothing in return but words.

Then out from the golden domed Kremlin in far away Moscow—out from the hated cities—out from America—came the idea. It blew like the strong winds that pound and sing their way across the great prairies.

"Machinery will do it! Come together—Co-operate—bring in the tractors and modern machinery; industrialize the land, and comfort and a decent life will be yours."

These were the new promises and the high hopes that were loosed over the Soviet land.

The State church, beautiful but inadequate, was pounded and propagandized and taxed out of business—and in its place came the new god of machinery. And the old sacred ikon in the corner of the living room was replaced by a poster of an American tractor.

SONS AND DAUGHTER OF FISHERMAN FILE SUIT AGAINST CORNWELLS MAN

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 21.—(INS)—The two grown-up sons and daughter of an aged New Jersey fisherman who was shot to death just a year ago by a deputy game warden of Bucks county, during an argument over a technical violation of the law, filed suit against his slayer in U. S. District Court here today for $50,000 damages.

The victim of the shooting was John Bintliff, Beverly, N. J. His alleged slayer and the defendant in the suit is John Mortimer, Cornwells Heights, deputy game warden of Bucks county.

Bintliff's children, Edward J., who was with his father at the time of the shooting, Clarence W., and their sister, Mary Blackburn, charge that his death was the result of wanton assault by Mortimer, although the latter was acquitted on the charge of homicide by a jury at Doylestown some months ago.

Among the items set forth in the claim are: Funeral expenses, $500; tombstone, $100; medical expenses, $300.

Quakertown

STOVEPIPE STARTS FIRE

QUAKERTOWN, Jan. 21.—Miss Ann Self, 19, of Philadelphia, who is a teacher of the Tohickon one-room school near here, yesterday proved a heroine when pupils discovered flames leaping through the roof of the school building.

After a few minutes spent in a fruitless fight to quench the blaze she quickly marshaled her nearly fifty pupils, ranging in age from 7 to 16, and with books under arms marched out of the burning structure to safety.

An alarm brought the Quakertown fire fighters, who fought the blaze, confining it to the roof, but did not get it under control before damage totaling several hundred dollars occurred.

It is believed it commenced from an overheated stovepipe. The pupils will have an enforced vacation of several weeks before the building can be repaired for use.

START INVESTIGATION IN AIR LINER CRASH

Colonel Lindbergh Will Take Prominent Part in The Official Hearing

OTHER INVESTIGATIONS

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 21.—(INS)—Official investigation to learn the cause of the most tragic disaster in the history of commercial aviation will open today with the first of four searching inquiries into the deaths of sixteen persons in the T. A. T.-Maddux air liner crash.

The tri-motored Ford plane crashed and exploded Sunday evening while en route from Agua Caliente, Mex., to Los Angeles, Cal.

The first inquiry is to be launched by the "Lindbergh line" officials at their Glendale terminal. The court, consisting of four experienced transport pilots and with Vice-President D. W. Tomlinson as chairman, will be open to the press. Witnesses are to present their stories of the plane's descent.

The findings, officials believe, will be that Pilot Basil Russell was trying to execute a left bank for a return trip to San Diego when the crash and explosion snuffed out sixteen lives.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, technical adviser of the air line, will take a prominent part in the official hearing. He surveyed the wreckage near Oceanside from the air yesterday and stated he will confer with other T. A. T.-Maddux officials before he issues a statement.

Other investigations will be conducted separately by the aviation division of the United States Department of Commerce, the San Diego Board of Air Control and by Coroner Schuyler Kelley of San Diego County.

Coroner Kelley stated he will swear in a coroner's jury today and that he will instruct the jurors to view the bodies and wreckage—but will postpone the taking of testimony of witnesses until Wednesday.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY ADDRESSES ROTARIANS

Arthur M. Eastburn Tells of Changes Suggested to Speed
Up Trial of Court Cases

WOULD BE A BIG AID

MORRISVILLE, Jan. 21.—Pointing out a number of changes suggested in the laws by which the trial of cases in the courts would be speeded up, District Attorney of Bucks County, Arthur M. Eastburn, of Doylestown, gave a very interesting address before local Rotarians. Mr. Eastburn took for his subject "The Administration of the Criminal Law."

Many of the practices and forms used in the administration of the law are the same today as used for hundreds of years, and the speaker questioned whether they are what is needed today. He cited the great increase in the number of cases which today are three times as many cases in the courts of Bucks county as were tried there five years ago.

The reasons for this are obvious the District Attorney added. The liquor question and the automobile are very largely responsible, he stated. The many automobile accidents which occur on highways bring many criminal as well as civil cases into the courts. The speaker also stated that there are many transients who get into the courts of Bucks county because they travel the great highways passing through this county.

Mr. Eastburn spoke on a number of changes in the laws which have been advocated by the judges and prosecuting officers of Pennsylvania as a means of speeding up the administration of the laws and for the good of all the people. He expressed his belief that the grand jury had outlived its usefulness. He spoke of the great expense involved upon the taxpayers because of the obsolete system now still in use, and stated in connection with doing away with the grand jury that there would not only be a great saving to the taxpayers, but the administration of the law would be greatly speeded up.

The speaker pointed out that when a case is brought from the office of the justice of the peace or magistrate it should be decided by the district attorney whether it should go to court for trial.

At present a criminal case is first taken before a justice of the peace, where the testimony is taken and then if deemed there is enough evidence or the case is serious enough, it is returned to the grand jury. The grand jury must then go all over the case again, and if these jurors believe a case has been made out, it is listed for trial in the criminal court. Mr. Eastburn argued it would be far better to return such cases to the district attorney's office and there decide whether it should be tried.

Another change suggested in the law is the trial of all misdemeanor cases without a jury. Have them tried before a judge alone and let him determine whether the defendant is guilty or innocent. Cases of felony of those of the serious nature could be tried by a jury, he concluded.

Schedule for Thursday, January 23: Whoopies vs. Fighting Five. Shamrocks vs. Arrows.

In the initial contest of the A. O. H. basketball league last evening the Arrows conquered the Whoopies 21 to 12 and thus dislodged them from second place, in the league standing, taking that position themselves.

Fallon did the bulk of the scoring for the Arrows, ringing in four field goals and one foul for nine points.

Ennis, versatile forward of the Whoopie aggregation, kept his eye on the basket and made seven free throws good, also scoring two field goals for a total of 11 points. This is the Whoopies' second straight loss, having been defeated by the Gypsies, 21 to 8, last Thursday evening.

Score:

Summary of game:

In the final game last evening the Gypsies took the Fighting Five into camp, defeating them by the score of 27 to 16. This was a much better game than the score indicates, both teams playing a clean passing brand of basketball.

E. Dugan, diminutive forward of the Gypsies, played well, scoring four field goals from difficult angles. "Add" Roe also played well making five field goals.

Joe Mulligan, of the Fighters, scored the most sensational shot ever seen on the local court this season when from a position well into the enemy's territory he tossed in a two-pointer. This happened in the closing minutes of the fray.

Incidentally this is also the Fighters' second straight loss, having forfeited to the Shamrocks last week for non-appearance.

RETURN OF REASON

Had investors and speculators been as cautious and jumpy before the stock crash as they are today there would have been neither inflation nor the ruinous and agonizing tumble that followed. So badly were the little ones, as well as the big ones, hurt in mind, heart and pocketbook that the man with a hundred dollars or a million to invest now investigates and never plunges.

At this moment the stock market is intensely watching business for an indication of the way in which it should go, and some business has its eyes on the market for the same purpose. But this does not apply to all business.

Convinced that the crash of securities did not visibly impair the buying power of the nation, the Ford plants are stepping up production in anticipation of an exceptionally good year. The steel industry has enough 1930 orders to prove the Ford theory right, to its own satisfaction.

A philosopher on Wall street could find much evidence to support the old belief that in any human emergency reason descends from its throne and elemental fears and superstitions crowd in to take its place.

Reason is reascending the throne, but not too soon. It was unreasonable to view the stock slump as a collapse of the whole economic structure.

MEN SHOULD BE INCLUDED

The woman of today is inclined to be wary in financial matters. There are at least two reasons for this. Primarily, women have become to some degree business partners of their husbands. They no longer are kept in ignorance of the family's financial affairs and even though they do not enter the marts of trade, subconsciously they pick up considerable knowledge of finance. In addition, the way of a high-pressure securities salesman with a woman has been accorded such wide publicity for years that women have tended toward extreme caution and conservatism. As a class they are no longer the easy marks they once were, or were reputed to have been.

Information in the hands of life insurance companies on the ultimate destination of the millions paid annually to widows is proof, however, that when the General Federation of Women's Clubs some time ago set out to educate womanhood in the pit falls of investment it had a fertile field to work in. There are still many gullible and innocent investors among the protected sex, in spite of the great strides taken in recent years.

But it is not only the women who are in need of this sort of education and enlightenment. It would be a good thing if educational campaigns of this sort were extended to include men, for they probably contribute considerably more than women to the Get-Rich-Quick gentry.

The man who has to coax himself along will hardly amount to much when he gets there.

Motorists are getting as bold in running down people as any ladies' sewing circle ever was.

The woman who sets out to make over a man after she has married him needs a competent architect.

SYNOPSIS
Joe Lane, ex-pugilist, song player, and hit of QRS radio station, and his wife, Katherine, have one child, Little Pal, whom they both adore. Joe, believing Arthur Phillips, manager of the station, to be his best friend, accepts a big contract from him, not knowing that Phillips is in love with Katherine. But Katherine, becoming angry because of Joe's careless and irresponsible habits, quarrels with him and during the reconciliation admits to Joe that Phillips wants her to be "nice to him." The song player is furious, but promises Katherine he will not start a fight. He is driving to the radio station with Phillips.

Joe tried to read the expression on Phillips' face as he made his answer. "She wanted to know if you'd have dinner with us Sunday night."

"Dinner on Sunday night? Oh, sure, I will. I'd be tickled to death," Phillips' eyes were still on the long stretch of quiet road ahead.

"Oh, yeah?" The tone of Joe's voice was like the snarl of a mad dog. It brought Phillips to startled attention. He glanced quickly at the man beside him.

"What's the matter?" the manager exclaimed sharply. There was a look on Joe's face that terrified him.

"You know what's the matter, you rotten double-crosser!" In a flash Joe had reached for the brakes, jamming them on tight. The car swerved unsteadily and then scraped along the curb with a long drawn scream. The shock of the sudden stop sent Phillips forward, gripping the wheel hard.

"You rotten double-crosser!"

"What's this all about?" Phillips demanded, stalling for time.

"Get out from under that wheel!" Joe ordered. "So you think you can come around trying to bribe my wife with contracts for me, do you? You rotten skunk! You thought she wouldn't tell me anything about it, didn't you? Well, she's told me everything, and now we're gonna have it out. Get out of this car before I drag you out." He reached with his hand, trying to grasp Phillips' coat collar.

The manager eluded him for a moment. "So you want to fight, do you?" He was putting up a brave front.

"Yeah, I won't hit you setting down. I'll leave that sort of fight to you," Joe jibed. "Come on, get out of there; I'll show you."

Once more he snatched at the manager's collar and this time caught it, jerking Phillips along the seat, trying to pull him from the car. But Phillips was almost as quick as the ex-pugilist. Struggling against the man, he managed at the same time to snatch a heavy wrench from the side pocket of the car. Quickly he raised it above his head, but Joe was quicker. He ducked as he saw the weapon descending and then felt a sharp pain in his left shoulder where it hit, barely missing his head.

The whole world suddenly went red. Flashes of blinding light ran in jagged streaks before Joe's eyes. There was no more pain in his shoulder. Nothing else existed save a man in front of him, and he was only a dark blob against the red. With one sharp twist he wrested Phillips from his seat and on to the sidewalk. Joe was back in the ring. The canvass was beneath his feet. He leaned against the ropes, and then the gong sounded. His left fist shot out.

Phillips evaded the on-rushing blow. His own right hand came in contact with the side of Joe's head. The song-plugger fell back a pace. Then both fists shot out as he rushed in, first the right, and then the fatal left, that had in the old days dropped men; an antagonist to the count. Phillips reeled and fell backwards. A woman screamed.

Joe stood staring down at the man on the sidewalk. He heard nothing, saw nothing, save the face of Phillips white and still in the light of the street lamp. Automatically he pulled down his disarranged guests on Wednesday of Mrs. J. P. McIntyre, of Germantown.

For five years now they have been building up this machine god, salvation is promised—salvation from the hopeless, backward, ignorant past and from the hard, cruel and bitter present.

It is impossible to overestimate what the tractor alone means to these hundred peasants. It has captured their whole imagination. It is the symbol of all machinery—and machinery is their new god.

"The tractor will give us freedom," a bearded old peasant in the south of Russia said to me. "We will work less and the tractor will plow better than we can do with horses. Machinery will free us peasants." And then with a twinkle in his wise old eyes he added, "we don't have to feed the tractors in the winter time when they are not working."

Another shrewd old peasant in an adjoining village said to me: "We don't belong to the collective now, but we will pretty soon. We've seen tractors. They can plow better than we can. They'll make us all rich some day."

So it goes all over great Russia. In every village are a little group of young men who have been in the Red Army or worked in the cities and have been set afire with the idea of collective ownership and modern machinery. They are the leaven that slowly is awakening the Red consciousness of these countless millions. They have given the initial momentum to this great mass movement that is beginning to sweep over Soviet land, crushing all opposition, breaking down all barriers, spreading the new, the real revolution.

In many ways it is not a pretty picture. At least five million of the best individual farmers, the most intelligent, the ablest and most necessary are being ruthlessly and consciously crushed to death. With the failure of the cities to supply goods and comforts to the villages in return for their grain the Russian peasant individually went on the greatest strike in all history. He simply refused to grow any more grain than he needed for himself. What was the use of a sack full of paper rubles if you couldn't buy anything with them?

And so it was the great war between the cities and the country was fought out in 1929 and 1931. The peasant won and Lenin brought in his new economic policy that permitted private trading and the more intelligent and shrewder peasant to again become a minor capitalist. He could again employ and loan money. He was dubbed "Kulak"—the first.

Of course the more he prospered the more he was despised. With Lenin's death Trotsky wanted to crush him at once. Over this point, Trotsky—to many the natural heir to the imperial purple of the great Lenin—and Stalin quarreled. In the end Trotsky was exiled from Soviet Russia—and then Stalin adopted Trotsky's theory of crushing this hated Kulak—but added to it this tremendous and startling dream of industrializing the backward Russian land and making it a part and parcel of the whole audacious five year industrialization plan that is to make or break the Soviets.

Today this good farmer—this hard-fisted individualistic man of the soil is being super-taxed out of his property, his horses and cattle and equipment, and he is being made poorer than the most indolent, most stupid peasant in all Russia. He is disfranchised, all privileges are taken from him, he is stripped of his goods and wealth, his children excluded from schools and he himself refused the right to go into the collective and cooperatives that are to replace all individual farming.

Naturally, he fights back. He burns and destroys and kills—and then he is tried before a Red people's court, and taken out and shot.

It is a cruelty difficult to understand—this stamping out of all that is most capable among the peasantry.

"You see, we must crush this rich and powerful peasant or he will crush us," one of the leaders of the National Collective movement explained to me. "If we let him into our collective, even after we have stripped him of his property he will dominate the collective. He is shrewder today than the poorer peasants. We must destroy him just as we destroyed the aristocracy and bourgeoisie of the cities. Once he is eliminated we can march ahead with our great dream of mechanizing the country life, and in the end of making a new and free citizen of the world from this dark, illiterate peasant of today."

Still More Millions Treat Colds Direct

Round-About Method of "Dosing" Gives Way To Modern Vaporizing Salve

More and more people each year are giving up the slow, indirect way of treating colds by "dosing" with internal medicines, and are adopting the modern direct treatment—Vicks VapoRub.

Vicks goes direct to the affected parts and checks the cold in two ways—its medicated vapors, released by the heat of the body, are inhaled direct to the inflamed air-passages; at the same time it acts direct through the skin like a poultice or plaster, "drawing out" tightness and soreness.

Vicks is especially appreciated by mothers because it is just rubbed on, and therefore, cannot upset children's delicate stomachs as "dosing" is so apt to do. Today the whole trend of medical practice is away from needless "dosing."

To keep pace with the ever-growing demand, the famous slogan, "17 Million Jars Used Yearly," was raised to "21 Million" a short time ago. This figure too has been outgrown, as there are now "Over 26 Million Jars Used Yearly"—a jar for every family in the United States.

ence as soon as King George had concluded his brief speech of welcome, began his address with a note of stern warning that naval competition among the powers of the world was already under way, and that if a stop was not put to it immediately, the events which led to the outbreak of the world war would see themselves duplicated again.

He urged that the delegates reach an agreement that could form the basis for a general disarmament conference at a later date, and called upon the nations of the world to respect their pledges under the Kellogg Pact.

"This agreement," he said with emphasis, "must put a stop to the competition which has already begun to show itself both in types and numbers of ships.

"If we are not careful we shall once more be involved in feverish competition such as heralded the outbreak of the war in 1914."

Each of the other chief delegates then spoke in turn, setting forth his nation's views on the subject of disarmament and pledging themselves to exert their powers to the fullest to preserve peace in the world by limiting the size of armed forces of the sea.

Secretary Stimson then took the floor and in a clear, strong voice, outlined to the assembled delegates the high hopes which the United States held that the conference would result in a complete success.

He stressed the fact, however, that this could be considered at best only a temporary achievement, which must be reviewed from time to time in the future in order that the changing political complexion of the world could be put to use to strengthen and amplify whatever peace-making agreement evolved from the present parley.

"I feel it is important to emphasize the fact that we do not look upon this effort toward disarmament as final," Secretary Stimson declared. "Naval limitation is a continuous process. We regard disarmament as a goal to be reached by successive steps, by frequent revision and improvement.

"Human affairs are not static, but are moving and we believe improving. A solution reached today, however perfect, may not respond to conditions at a later date."

Premier Tardieu of France also expressed high hopes that the conference would result in success, but laid particular emphasis on the fact that whatever agreement is reached must be subservient to further action by the League of Nations.

He urged that the delegates not be bound by mathematical formulae, stating that no mere formula can "resist the pressure of life."

Grandi, who spoke on behalf of Italy, called the attention of the delegates to the peace program of Premier Benito Mussolini and declared that a long period of peace throughout the world is necessary for its fulfillment.

Reijiro Wakatsuki, former Premier of Japan, told the conference that his nation was prepared to go the limit in disarmament, consistent with its national security.

A dense fog penetrated the gallery, giving it an eerie aspect with its klieg lights and its microphone, of which a gold plated one had been provided for the use of His Majesty the King.

The delegates and diplomats, representing a total of forty-seven nations, were in their assigned seats well in advance of the King's arrival. Premier MacDonald circulated among the assemblage, introducing any of the delegates who had not met their co-workers on a social footing. The wives of all the delegates were in attendance, they being the only women in the gallery.

GARAGE MAN FINDS KONJOLA BEST MEDICINE

New and Different Compound Quickly Relieves Severe Stomach and Liver Ailments

MR. EARL CARR

"I suffered terribly from indigestion," said Mr. Earl Carr, 1816 West Fourteenth street, Erie, Pa. "Gases, forming after meals, so bloated me that I could scarcely breathe and the pain was often frightful. My liver was sluggish and bilious spells caused me blinding headaches for hours at a time. The pain from weakened kidneys made sleep impossible and my general health was in such a state that I could scarcely do my work. I tried medicine after medicine but nothing helped me.

"It required but four bottles of Konjola to put me back on my feet. Gas no longer forms after meals and my appetite is back to normal again. My liver functions properly and bilious attacks are a thing of the past. I never have those splitting headaches now. My kidneys are normal and I sleep as well as I ever did. Food and rest have restored my strength and I am a new man. I owe all this to Konjola and wish to heartily endorse this great medicine."

Konjola is sold in Bristol at Hoffman's Cut Rate store and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section. (Adv)

... on the ice it's GRACE!

... in a cigarette it's TASTE!

THE easy graceful swing of the skater has years of training behind it.

Equally, the smooth sparkling zest of Chesterfield is no chance affair. Tobaccos are chosen for mildness, for fragrance, for wholesome flavor—then patiently aged and mellowed, exactly blended and cross-blended.

And unvarying good taste is the constant result—quite naturally, when every step of every process has good taste as its goal:

"TASTE above everything"
